Summary of work completed in the reporting week:

Assigned roles for frontend and backend teams, and discussed what programming languages our team is going to be using. A private github repository was made with the team members. Team members collaborated on the concerns of how we wanted to create the database for the ingredients, didn't conclude however we all were going to do our own research and discuss it in the next meeting.

Summary of work planned for next week:

Talk more about the database schema for the project and the requirements. Frontend team will start working on the main landing page for the website with at least two functioning buttons (create account or login). Making sure that the text boxes are there for usernames and passwords. Make the main user dashboard once logged in (blank). The backend team will be figuring out the best route for storing and checking users login credentials and troubleshoot.
